Many Canadians are concerned about their financial security in retirement and preserving the value of their estates for the next generation. It's a common and understandable situation.

What's surprising is that so few have taken the time to create an estate plan that can help organize their assets, minimize taxes and pass along their estate in the manner they intend.

Just getting started is often the most difficult step you'll take. Once you've made the commitment to get started, you'll find it's far easier than you think.

To learn more, join the BMO Trust Team for this informative seminar on December 6th .
